Meadows are quiet, silent. It is through a more attentive and closer look that their essence and the multiple layers they are made of can be captured. Similarly to meadows, the Rubia rug is an invitation to observe and discover the various color gradients, textures and hidden details that compose its surface. Woven with a blend of mottled Tussah silk, the texture of this rug resembles the tiny Rubia flowers. Rubia is the Italian name of an endemic species of flora found on the island of Sardinia. Since ancient times its roots have been used for dyeing textiles and yarns.
